Monthly comment

Global equity markets experienced increased volatility in February amid heightened geopolitical tensions. The US's failed attempt to broker a peace deal between Russia and Ukraine, coupled with President Trump's announcement of potential tariffs on China, Mexico, and Canada, heightened the risk of trade disputes. Despite higher-than-forecasted inflation figures in both the US and UK creating uncertainty around future interest rate cuts, yields moderated during the month. Notwithstanding the volatile environment, the Partners Group Listed Investments SICAV - Listed Infrastructure Fund performed well, outperforming both the benchmark and broader markets significantly. It extended its gains for the year, now 330bps ahead of the benchmark, largely due to most portfolio companies reporting solid FY24 results that were in line with or ahead of expectations. Sector-wise, renewables, water utilities, and waste managers performed well, supported by strong FY24 results, while railways and logistics declined due to concerns around cross-border trade.

Among the best performers, BBGI, the UK social infrastructure operator, announced an agreed takeover offer from British Columbia Investment Management. The deal, valuing the company at just over GBP 1 billion, represented a 21% premium to the previous day's price. With completion expected in Q3 2025 and subsequent delisting, the Fund exited its position given the stock's small discount to the agreed takeover price post-announcement.

Orsted, the Danish renewables operator, also performed well after posting better-than-expected FY24 results. The company revised its 2030 outlook and capex plan, reducing capital expenditure needs by around 25% and providing significant relief to its stretched balance sheet. Orsted reiterated its targeted ROCE of 13% and IRR spread to WACC of 150-300bps, which should support margins amid rising costs.

On the downside, Sempra, the US utility, declined sharply following its FY24 earnings announcement. While 2024 results were in-line, the company cut guidance for 2025-26 due to unfavorable regulatory updates in California and a pending rate case review in Texas following an upgraded capex plan. However, Sempra upgraded its medium- to long-term earnings growth from 6-8% to 7-9%, with management remaining confident that earnings will be higher at the end of the capital plan (2028-29) than previously forecasted. Despite the near-term setback, the long-term outlook remains unchanged, and Sempra now ranks among the cheapest regulated utilities in the US.
