Monthly comment

Global equities saw higher volatility in the month of March and struggled amid increasing geopolitical tensions and recession fears in the US. President Trump's proposed tariffs on foreign imports further fueled trade concerns, leading to declining consumer confidence and downward revisions of growth forecasts. Despite this turbulent backdrop, the Partners Group Listed Investments SICAV - Listed Infrastructure Fund managed a slight increase in value, significantly outperforming global market indices by over 500 basis points. Notably, the fund's performance was driven by company-specific factors, including robust FY 24 results, rather than macro concerns. Regulated utilities and toll roads demonstrated particular strength, while railroads and logistics companies faced challenges amid cross-border trade worries. Regionally, European and UK stocks generally outpaced their US counterparts.

Among the best performers, Elia (ELI), the Belgian grid operator, performed exceptionally strongly in the month following the much-anticipated announcement of its capital raise to fund its capex plan. This development alleviated a key concern weighing on the stock. Elia unveiled a EUR 2.2bn equity package, comprising an EUR 850m private placement involving prominent investors such as ATLAS, BlackRock, Canada Pension Plan Investment Board, and Publi-T/NextGrid. Additionally, the company committed to a EUR 1.35bn rights issue, which had already secured 55% subscription from four anchor investors. Coinciding with this news, Elia reported impressive FY24 results, showcasing a 30% year-on-year increase in net profit and a 28% growth in its regulated asset base.

ENN Energy (2688), the Chinese gas distribution utility, also delivered a strong performance after receiving a take-private offer from one of its anchor investors. The proposed acquisition price represented a 35% premium to its previous closing price. While ENN Energy currently trades approximately 20% below the acquisition price, we anticipate this gap will narrow as pending approvals are secured.

On the downside, Logistics (ODFL, ARCB), the US logistics companies struggled in the month facing headwinds due to concerns surrounding potential Canadian and Mexican tariffs and their impact on the US freight transportation sector. Despite February volumes aligning with expectations, the weak year-to-date performance primarily stems from external factors and international trade volatility rather than fundamental issues within the companies themselves.
