Monthly comment

Global equity markets experienced increased volatility and faced challenges in March due to rising geopolitical tensions and concerns about a potential recession in the United States. President Trump continued to escalate trade concerns, which resulted in falling consumer confidence and downgrades to growth outlooks. In this volatile environment, the Partners Group Listed Investments SICAV - Listed Private Equity Fund (I EUR) suffered and declined in value. All sectors contributed negatively, with alternative asset managers experiencing the steepest declines. Despite no specific negative news, stocks were impacted by shifting market sentiment and a contraction in valuation multiples.

CVC, a European alternative asset manager, was one of the poorest performers. Although the company's H2 2024 results exceeded earnings expectations with growth in management fees and strong fund performance, analysts expressed worry about the weaker outlook for performance fees, potentially worsening due to economic uncertainty. KKR, a U.S. alternative asset manager, also underperformed, reporting 17% growth in monetization income but falling short of market expectations.

The outlook on longer-term yields, which has evolved since Trump's election, played a crucial role in March's performance. Both top and bottom performers were influenced by anticipated higher long-dated yields. Kinnevik, a Swedish private equity firm, performed worst due to its growth-focused portfolio, which is more sensitive to interest rate fluctuations. In contrast, BDCs held up well, particularly Golub BDC, Blue Owl BDC, and Ares Capital Corporation. These companies invest in floating-rate loans and benefited from rising base rates coupled with stable credit quality, which resulted in an improved outlook for investment income.
